Trump parade complaint spills over to council

Hanover College President Lake Lambert III addressing members of Madison City Council on Wednesday.

President Lambert asks city to denounce incident

BY COLLIN OVERTON

A discussion over the alleged harassment of students from participants of an Oct. 24 Trump parade through Hanover College went on for about 45 minutes at Wednesday night's Madison City Council meeting.

A debate over what really happened that Sunday has ensued after a professor posted to Facebook student reports of people in the parade were "spitting at students, pulling up signs, and telling a student of color to 'go back where they came from.' "

Hanover College President Lake Lambert III sent out an email to the campus community that week mentioning three different reports of harassment that students reported to Campus Safety. Organizers did not notify the college before taking the 120-plus-car convoy through campus, he said.

He sent another email to organizers of the parade, saying one Latinx student reported being told to "go back where he came from," another male student said he was called a homophobic slur and a female student said she was called a "Trump-hating bitch," organizer Greg Sanders said.

Lambert appeared before City Council Wednesday night to voice his concerns over the incident and

County contributes to Heritage Park purchase

County jail project to be bid in December

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Jefferson County Commission on Thursday agreed to contribute $15,000 to the Heritage Trail Conservancy of Madison to help the organization purchase the final piece of property the group needs to develop a heritage park along the Ohio River in downtown Madison.

Bob Greene, who has spearheaded the Heritage Trail project since its inception, said the land is located in the "heart of the park" and while it is available now, if the organization cannot come up with funds by the Dec. 17 closing, other buyers could step forward and it would be "catastrophic to not get this property."

The Heritage Trail, considered one of the gems in Southern Indiana in terms of outdoor recreation and public green space where visitors can enjoy the beauty of nature, winds its way from the Ohio Riverfront to Madison's hilltop, traversing through bottomland and up the wooded hillside while following along the city's historic railroad incline and over a historic stone arch bridge. The trail also connects with the Madison Riverfront Development Committee's Riverwalk to provide a pedestrian walkway from the Milton-Madison Bridge to the former rail line and then on to the hilltop.

All told the conservancy owns 23 acres of property in downtown Madison — mostly purchased through donations from private individuals, local businesses and industries and fundraisers — but the missing piece is the tract right in the middle of a proposed park site that would one day include a shelter facility capable of hosting educational and entertainment events, a stream feature and other natural areas for use by children and other visitors.

"We want a place where children can explore their world," Greene said.

Bob Greene of the Madison Heritage Trail Conservancy appeals to Jefferson County Commissioners (facing, from left) Robert Little, David Bramer and Ron Lee for funding to help purchase a tract of land along the Ohio River in downtown Madison that is vital to future expansion and development of Heritage Park. The Commissioners agreed to contribute $15,000 to support the project.

Jefferson County Commissioners President David Bramer displays a design sketch of what a portion of the proposed new Jefferson County Jail will look like as Commissioners Robert Little and Ron Lee look on. Bramer said Thursday night that the $35 million project expects to have construction documents completed and go to bids by mid-December. Meanwhile, a construction manager will be sought to oversee the project.

Slygh named to Kring's seat on MCSB

BY COLLIN OVERTON

Madison Consolidated Schools Board of Trustees on Thursday night selected Lori Slygh, a guidance counselor at Southwestern High School and formerly at Madison, to fill a seat vacated by former board president Rob Kring until the end of 2022.

Kring, a board member since 2014, announced he would resign at an Oct. 7 meeting to move to Ohio to be closer to family. The board received six applicants for the position and interviewed them candidates during a special work session on Oct. 19.

Before the board made a decision, however, school board member-elect Jay Roney brought up complaints about an alleged breach of bylaws in the way the board made its decision.

Roney said he was told on Oct. 8 that Kring had resigned. Having been excited about potentially working with Kring on the board, Roney reached out to Kring and asked if he would reconsider, he said.

Roney later heard rumors that Sly had already been chosen as Kring's replacement and began

Health Department sounds alarm as COVID-19 cases rise

Two schools shift to virtual learning

BY MARK CAMPBELL

With the US reporting back-to-back days with more than 100,000 new COVID-19 cases — including more than 120,000 alone on Thursday — the virus pandemic that has gripped the country now going on 10 months seems to be getting worse rather than better.

Indiana and Jefferson County are no exception to that trend with 200,823 positive cases statewide since March — including 4,714 on Thursday — and more than 500 cases now in Jefferson County with more than 100 of those in just the past week, according to local health officials.

The Jefferson County Health Department reported Thursday that the county's current COVID positive case count stands at 517 with 103 new positive cases this week. Of that total, 278 cases are considered active — meaning they are still in their isolation period or still having symptoms. District 9, the district in which Jefferson is located, has seen hospitalization rates rise continually this past week.

"As we stated last week, and we will continue to repeat ourselves, we ALL as individuals, business owners, community leaders, need to do our part to ensure

Biden on cusp of presidency

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Democrat Joe Biden was on the cusp of winning the presidency on Friday as he opened up narrow leads over President Donald Trump in the critical battlegrounds of Georgia and Pennsylvania.

Those put Biden in a stronger position to capture the 270 Electoral College votes needed to take the White House. The winner will lead a country facing a historic set of challenges, including a surging pandemic and deep political polarization.

The focus on Pennsylvania, where Biden led Trump by more than 9,000 votes, and Georgia, where Biden led by more than 1,500, came as Americans entered a third full day after the election without knowing who will lead them for the next four years. The prolonged process added to the anxiety of a nation whose racial and cultural divides were inflamed during the heated campaign.

Biden was at his home in Wilmington, Delaware, as the vote count continued and aides said he would address the nation in primetime. Trump remained in the White House residence as more results trickled in, expanding Biden's lead in must-win Pennsylvania. In the West Wing, televisions remained tuned to the news amid trappings of normalcy, as reporters lined up for coronavirus tests and outdoor crews worked on the North Lawn on a mild, muggy fall day.

Trump's campaign, meanwhile, was quiet — a dramatic difference from the day before, when it held a morning conference call projecting confidence and

Free septic system workshop set

BY SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

The Central Muscatatuck Watershed Project, along with the Jefferson and Ripley County Soil and Water Conservation Districts will hold a free septic system workshop on Thursday, Dec. 17.

Called "Septics: A Messy Business" the workshop will be held on a Zoom Meeting format from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. and is open to any future home builder, home owner, contractor, septic disposal company, realtor or anyone who is interested in learning more about septic systems and how to properly maintain them.

Discussion will include: Correct Soils for Septic Systems; Difference in Septic Systems for Different Situations; Rules of Operating Permits Before & After Septic Installation; and Importance of Proper Care for a System.

Anyone interested in attending the workshop should call and register by Dec. 14. Reservations can be made by calling the Jefferson County SWCD office at 812-265-7609 or email Kristin.miller@jeffersoncounty.in.gov.

Man pointed loaded handgun at police before fatal shooting in Seymour

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

The man fatally wounded by Seymour police on Nov. 1 apparently produced a handgun and pointed it at officers before being gunned down alongside Tipton Street near Taco Bell.

Indiana State Police Detectives are continuing to investigate the shooting but evidence indicates that officers responding to a shoplifting report at Walmart located the suspect, Jason S. Cline, 43, of Beech Grove, near the Speedway Gas Station in possession of a shopping cart containing suspected stolen property.

As officers approached Cline, he abandoned the cart and fled westbound and eventually northbound across Tipton Street, entering a deep ditch in front of the Taco Bell near Tipton Street at Burkhart Boulevard.

Officers caught up to Cline and attempted to take him into custody. While attempting to place him in handcuffs, he continued to resist arrest, produced a handgun and pointed it at the officers. Both officers fired their handguns, striking him.

The handgun in Cline's possession was later found to be loaded and had been reported as stolen. The officers provided medical attention to Cline at the scene before he was transported to Schneck Medical Center in Seymour where he died as a result of the injuries.

On Tuesday, Nov. 3 an autopsy was completed and Cline's identity was confirmed. He also previously went by the names Jason Tabor and Jason Tabor Cline. Toxicology results are pending.

The Seymour Police Department requested that detectives from the ISP-Versailles Post respond to conduct the investigation into the incident. According to Seymour Police Chief Bryant Lucas, both officers were placed on administrative leave while the investigation is ongoing, per department protocol.

At the conclusion of the investigation, the case will be presented to the Jackson County Prosecutors Office for review.

to worry that discussions about a candidate away from open meetings would violate the district's bylaws and open door policy.

"Later that day I went back and watched the board meeting via Facebook and I heard Ms. [Joyce] Imel (a board member), go on the record and say there had seemed to be a discussion about something she was not involved with. All of this led John [Schutte] and I writing a letter to the school board to follow the bylaws …

"My main concern is the way this was handled from the beginning. It may not look good in the public's eyes. I'm also concerned that the citizens who wrote in letters of intent did so for no reason because some of you, I believe, already decided back on Oct. 8, or maybe even before," Roney said.

Roney said he also shared the information with the other school board member-elect, David Storie, and a few other candidates interviewed for the seat last week.

"At first — I'm going to be honest — I was worried about coming forward sharing this since the company I co-own has a service contract with the school. But we as board members have a duty to be transparent and follow the [Indiana School Boards Association] code of ethics, as well as the bylaws," Roney said.

Board member Jeanne Dugle nominated Slygh for the seat, after which Imel nominated George Alcorn. When it came time to vote, Dugle, Larry Henry and Jodi Yancey voted for Slygh, while Imel was the sole board member in favor of Alcorn.

The board then nominated and voted Dugle to fill in as board secretary through December.

After the meeting, Superintendent Jeff Studebaker would not comment on whether he thought board members colluded, but said the board followed proper procedures on advertising and interviewing candidates.

"We were really concerned that night when he put it out there that if that made the paper that it was going to scare off candidates … some folks have really taken offense to the fact that it appears this was taken care of behind the scenes," he said.

Following the board member decision, the board held a work session on facilities projects to be approved at the regular board meeting on Nov. 11.

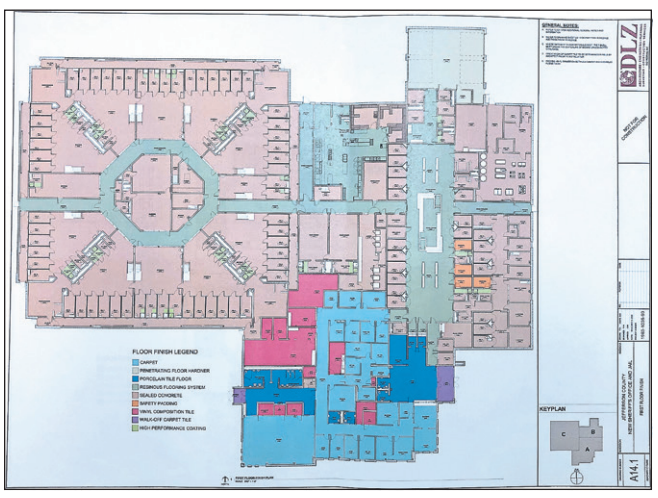
He added that the group needs about $200,000 to buy the property to complete the park footprint and most of that money has once again been raised through private donations, including a $100,000 contribution from a donor who wishes to remain anonymous. He asked county officials for a $15,000 contribution to put the project over the top and clear the way for the closing in December.

Greene said once the Conservancy owns the property it will be better positioned to compete for grants that will help complete the group's vision of developing the property.

"We want world class features," Greene said, later adding, "The potential here for what we want to do is just stunning."



Mark Campbell

The floor plan of the proposed new Jefferson County Jail is shown. The project expects to have construction documents ready to advertise for bids by mid-December.

Commissioner Robert Little said he appreciates the group's vision for the property and that the proposed shelter looks to be suitable to accommodate a number of events like weddings and other gatherings. Little said he hopes the group's vision for the project can be realized and noted Jefferson County needs more facilities like that in a number of its communities.

Commissioner David Bramer agreed, noting the proposed shelter's size and design would be an asset as a venue for music concerts, plays and other entertainment.

IN OTHER BUSINESS

• Heard a report by Bramer that construction documents are being drawn on the county's jail project with plans to advertise for bids in mid-December. In a related matter, Bramer said a recommendation will also be made to hire a construction manager, possibly later this month, to oversee the project and all the contractors and subcontractors who will build the $35 million facility.

Bramer displayed several design sketches on what the facility will look like and said the county's Jail committee has worked with the sheriff and courts to accommodate most of the needs identified during months of study. The facility will not feature a courtroom but Bramer noted Jefferson County has very few jury trials. The facility will have a training area where the jail can hold classes and seminars for staff members as well as jail employees from other jails in the region.

• The Commission accepted a bid from KLB Excavating of Austin to upgrade an undersized 7-foot culvert on County Road 1525 West into a bridge. KLB's $276,732.05 bid was the lowest of eight bids on the project and more than $100,000 lower than the highest bid.

• Heard a report that the Safe Haven Baby Box — a secure place of last resort where a mother can safely and anonymously surrender a newborn she is unable to care for — that was to be located at the Jefferson County EMA building. The device will now probably be located in downtown Madison and King's Daughters' Health, which has the expertise and staff to deal with newborns, has formed a partnership with Safe Haven Baby Boxes and The Madison Mission to provide services.

FOOD INSPECTIONS

Jefferson County

The Jefferson County Health Department conducts quarterly inspections of all food establishments or locations that handle food in the county. Health inspections become a public record 10 days after the inspection takes place.

The documents highlight critical, noncritical and repeat violations during each inspection or follow-up. Critical violations are listed. All records are supplied by the Jefferson County Health Department, which can be reached at 812-273-1942.

(September 28-October 3, 2020)

Arby's. COMPLAINT. Customer complaint received stating an employee was not wearing masks in drive-through. All employees are required to have a mask on while working. It is a violation against the current executive order.

Bad Apple Macs. One non-critical.

Chillbilly Treats. One non-critical.

Dollar General, 408 Jefferson Street, Madison. COMPLAINT. Customer complaint received stating that employees were not wearing masks. During the complaint inspection the employee running the cash register had a mask on. No objectionable conditions noted at time of complaint inspection.

Gallery 115. No violations.

Indiana Spike and Rail Company. No violations noted at time of temporary inspection setup at New Madison Brewing Company.

MCHS. No violations.

MJHS. No violations.

Mike's Grill. COMPLAINT. Customer complaint stated that employees were not wearing their masks and gloves properly. Also paper menus were being reused without a way to sanitize them. During inspection all employees were observed with masks. In regard to the menus, the owners can laminate menus or continue to use paper ones but they will need to be thrown out after each use.

Powerhouse Kitchen IKE. Two non-critical.

Wendy's. COMPLAINT. Customer complaint stated that employees were making salads without gloves on. During the inspection no bare handed contact was observed.

(October 5-10, 2020)

City Meat Market. COMPLAINT. Customer complaint stated that an employee had their mask around their neck. The customer made remark to the employee but the employee did not pull up their mask. During the complaint inspection both employees were observed with their masks on.

Domino's Pizza. One critical. Hand wash sinks need to be maintained clean at all times and should not be used for anything other than washing hands. Food debris was observed layering the bottom of both sinks.

Dutch Discount Market. No violations.

Fast Lane, 468 Lagrange Road, Hanover. One critical. Milk and Naked Brand juice was found past date in the walk-in cooler. These containers need to be pulled so customers do not have access to them. Four non-critical.

Junkyard BBQ LLC, Seymour. No violations at time of pre-operational inspection.

Kent Mercantile. Five critical. Employees must wear mask at all times. Upon entry of the establishment the employee running the register was not wearing mask which is a violation of the current executive order. Employees handling ready to eat food did not wash their hands before starting to prepare food. Hands should be washed before placing gloves on. Dates must be placed onto open deli meats after opening the product. The 7 day rule applies to these products so by dating the packages all employees are aware when the products must be thrown away. The label on the spray bottle at the pizza station has rubbed off and is no longer visible. Five non-critical.

Lupitas Grocery Store. Three critical. The following foods were discovered stacked improperly: beef meat was sitting on a box full of lettuce. Pork chorizo stacked over tortillas in the cooler next to the cash register. Past date milk was found in the stand up cooler next to the register. The milk needs to be thrown away. A spray bottle was found near the drink fountain without a label. Five non-critical.

Mi Viejo. No violations during pre-operational inspection.

Moyashi Company. No violations.

held a flurry of hastily arranged press conferences announcing litigation in key states.

With his pathway to reelection appearing to greatly narrow, Trump was testing how far he could go in using the trappings of presidential power to undermine confidence in the vote.

On Thursday, he advanced unsupported accusations of voter fraud to falsely argue that his rival was trying to seize power in an extraordinary effort by a sitting American president to sow doubt about the democratic process.

"This is a case when they are trying to steal an election, they are trying to rig an election," Trump said from the podium of the White House briefing room.

The president pledged on Friday, in a statement, to pursue challenges "through every aspect of the law" but also suggested that his fight was "no longer about any single election." Biden spent Thursday trying to ease tensions and project a more traditional image of presidential leadership. After participating in a coronavirus briefing, he declared that "each ballot must be counted."

"I ask everyone to stay calm. The process is working," Biden said. "It is the will of the voters. No one, not anyone else who chooses the president of the United States of America."

Trump showed no sign of giving up and was was back on Twitter around 2:30 a.m. Friday, insisting the "U.S. Supreme Court should decide!"

Trump's erroneous claims about the integrity of the election challenged Republicans now faced with the choice of whether to break with a president who, though his grip on his office grew tenuous, commanded sky-high approval ratings from rank-and-file members of the GOP. That was especially true for those who are eyeing presidential runs of their own in 2024.

Maryland GOP Gov. Larry Hogan, a potential presidential hopeful who has often criticized Trump, said unequivocally: "There is no defense for the President's comments tonight undermining our Democratic process. America is counting the votes, and we must respect the results as we always have before."

But others who are rumored to be considering a White House run of their own in four years aligned themselves with the incumbent, including Sen. Josh Hawley, R-Mo., who tweeted support for Trump's claims, writing that "If last 24 hours have made anything clear, it's that we need new election integrity laws NOW."

Trump's campaign engaged in a flurry of legal activity, saying it would seek a recount in Wisconsin and had filed lawsuits in Pennsylvania, Michigan and Georgia.

But judges in the three states quickly swatted down legal action. A federal judge who was asked to stop vote counts in Philadelphia instead forced the two sides to reach an agreement without an order over the number of observers allowed.

PARADE

the precedent it sets for the community.

He said that while he and his family were welcomed into the community when he came to Hanover, these incidents, unless denounced, create an "echo chamber" that project voices of divisiveness.

Lambert said he had already met with representatives from the Madison Area Chamber of Commerce and human resources departments from area companies who said they knew of employees or other people with similar experiences in Jefferson County.

He added that while some may have seen it as an isolated incident, for visitors or newcomers who encounter such situations, that is their experience with the community and they would have no idea whether that view was shared widely with the community or if it truly was a one-off incident.

"The only way that we can communicate that it is not is as leaders of this community, more forcefully communicating that that is not who we are, that we do not agree with that behavior, that we are a welcoming community, and that we welcome all people from all walks of life from all different groups," Lambert said. "That's my hope that as a community we can move forward with.

"It's something that Hanover College needs and wants. It is imperative that that is the message this community sends. I need that message to be communicated loud, repeatedly and clearly so that I can continue to recruit the best students from across the country and around the world."

Mayor Bob Courtney responded by saying the city already had processes in place to handle such incidents, namely the Humans Relations Commission (HRC) that has been around since the Civil Rights Movement of the 1960s and has had a "steady hand" through tumultuous times in local and national history he said.

Courtney added that the city had also reaffirmed its resolution on anti-discrimination and the protection of diverse individuals on June 3. He noted that no complaints of the Hanover incident were received by the HRC and asked that when there are allegations and complaints, they should be vetted through the right leadership channels.

He also pointed to the dangers of social media in inflaming the situation, creating even more divisiveness and pitting people of different opinions against each other. Courtney said he hoped the college held its staff to the same code of conduct.

Regarding the HRC, however, Lambert said that he had attended the past couple meetings, where members said they were concerned about the degree of power the commission actually has and the actions they can take.

Courtney admitted there was probably work to be done on getting the right members on the commission and letting the community know there was infrastructure for handling those kinds of complaints.

City Clerk-Treasurer Rick Berry, who helped organize the parade with the Sons and Daughters of Liberty, said the nature of the accusation on social media bothered him.

Berry said the professor who first posted about the alleged incidents would not bring the students with her to meet with Berry out of wanting to protect them, but when Berry offered to meet with her after students gave her information she could present as evidence, the professor told him it was not her responsibility to come up with evidence; rather, it was his job to prove it didn't happen. She took down the entire social media post down shortly thereafter, Berry said.

After Berry asked Lambert what evidence he had of the incident, Lambert said he had statements from students to the director of Campus Safety and that Safety had reviewed surveillance video and found evidence showing that the alignment of cars and timing matched student descriptions in at least two of the cases. However, he said there was no audio or high enough resolution to read lips and the students apparently did not video the incident on their mobile devices, he said.

The accusations combined with a lack of evidence frustrated Berry.

"I've been in two Trump parades and I've been to a Trump rally, and they're made up of the most patriotic people you'll ever meet in your life — grandmothers, grandfathers, mothers, fathers, kids, young people — they are a celebration of our country and they are a celebration of our president," he said.

Berry then referenced "relentless attacks on our president, non-stop with no evidence," like impeachment and the Special Counsel investigation into the 2016 election. He said the parade was Trump's supporters' outlet for showing pride in their country and president.

"This is all crazy. And I hate to see our young people get filled with these kinds of thoughts. Because we are a great country, and the people in these parades are great people. I talked to people in the front of the parade, in the middle of the parade and in the back of the parade — they've called me and none of them said they saw anything," Berry said.

At that point Courtney interrupted, noting that a polar political climate, identity politics and inability of people of different opinions to get along resulted in an escalated situation. He voiced a need for a path to resolving differences in non-hostile ways.

Berry then spoke more apologetically, noting college students had no reason to worry about coming to Madison.

"It breaks my heart to hear them say they're afraid to come into town, because there's nothing for them to be afraid of. We love when the college kids come to town and they're welcome everywhere as far as I can tell," Berry said.

Lambert concluded by saying guests were always welcome on Hanover's campus, but this scenario was a little different. He made an analogy to a neighbor's pond he used to fish from with his father as a child.

"The guy was really nice in letting us fish there — we never had to ask — but I didn't invite my church picnic there, I didn't bring my Boy Scout troop to camp there and I didn't bring my marching band to play there either," Lambert said.

During a public comment period, longtime Jefferson County resident and former Southwestern teacher Kettig Coghill said he resented the idea that the community was particularly racist. Coghill attended the parade and pointed out the lack of video evidence supporting any harassment as a suspicious hole in the allegations considering that camera phones have become so common.

"I taught high school for 30 years, folks, and students lie," Coghill said. "…The suggestion that Hanover College students should use a buddy system to go to Madison or Hanover also offends me … I support diversity in every way and I have found that that's true with most of the people I know … Do we have bigots? We've got some. Do we have some rednecks? We've got a few. We've got some racists. We can't control every individual."

Coghill then relayed some statistics to point out Hanover College's own lack of diversity.

Hanover senior and non-traditional student Katherine McCall also spoke. Having participated in the Hanover Trump parade and another in Cincinnati, she said the backlash had made her consider transferring schools, even with four classes left before graduation.

McCall, 32, said she received distressing texts and emails from students of color, some of whom she tutored and was close to, saying they supported her but worried about her returning to campus for her safety and mental health. She said she also received an email from a staff member she was close with, calling her and everyone in the procession a white nationalist.

"As someone who cut her teeth doing relief work in war-torn Africa in my 20s and later in the Middle East, and finally in China for three straight years with only one trip home, being called that is about the highest insult I could possibly conceive of," she said.

Greg Sanders, the organizer of the event, gave his reasoning for driving on campus. The purpose was to capture video of the procession going around the scenic overlook to send to the Trump campaign, he said. He also wanted to honor Vice President Mike Pence's alma mater.

Sanders publicly apologized to Lambert for the fallout from the parade and condemned any action of harassment, racism or intimidation if it happened.

"There is no place for that in our community — in our town, our county, the City of Madison — anywhere. And moving forward I want to be part of that, as [Mayor Courtney] spoke about, the bridge. Bridging the gap between those that feel intimidated and those of us that can help them feel welcome in this community," Sanders said.

Madison resident and Trump parade participant Rick Ruess also spoke and denied that there was any harassment. He addressed Lambert directly and noted that because of taxpayer-funded grants like 21st Century Scholars and Next Generation Hoosier scholarships, he also had equity in the property.

"As far as visiting your pond, that's partly my pond. I understand you're a private college, but we also have some equity in that as well … if you have video of something, show it. Because we were called liars because we asked about that … you have to be able to back it up and have the people to accuse you," Reuss said.

Council member Patrick Thevenow thanked the speakers for bringing the discussion forward.

"It's a difficult subject and it's a difficult conversation for us all to have, but one that is necessary as we work to build better bridges and there's always work to be done in our country and our city, and always work to be done to build a more perfect union," Thevenow said.

"I appreciate President Lambert taking the time to address the community at our recent city council meeting, as well as, everyone who also took time to share their perspectives on the matter of diversity. I hope it came across clearly that nobody has the moral high ground to accuse others of behavior they themselves might be tacitly endorsing and that hate, discrimination, intimidation, bias, racism, or bigotry has no place in our community," Courtney said later. "We all agreed there is work to do on this front and I pledge to do my part to work more closely with our Commission on Human Relations toward a more inclusive and diverse community for all and I believe President Lambert will do the same."

75% vote early in Trimble

BY COLLIN OVERTON

About 57% of the registered voters in Trimble County cast ballots in Tuesday's election in what was the highest turnout in recent years both locally and across the nation.

A total of 4,328 voted — those that did voted overwhelmingly Republican — totals from the Trimble County Clerk's Office show. County Clerk Tina Browning said that is the highest turnout her office has seen in her roughly 25 years with the county.

More than 72% of those voters voted absentee — 685 mail-in and 2,433 walk-in — while only 1,140 actually showed up at the polls on election day.

The headliner for local elections was the race for 47th District State Representative, a seat held by Trimble Democrat Rick Rand, until he decided to step down this year. Republican newcomer Felicia Rabourn got roughly two-thirds of the vote in her debut election over Jack Couch, a former Trimble County Judge Executive with more than 40 years of public service experience.

Rabourn outpolled Couch in both absentee votes (Couch 1,294, Rabourn, 1,783) and on election day (Coucch 352, Rabourn 847). The Henry County native also outpolled Couch in the other Henry, Carroll and Gallatin, the other counties in the district for a 13,913 to 6,134 win,

"Thank you! Thank you to every voter who believed in me. Thank you to my donors for giving me the ability to run a strong campaign. Thank you to my wonderful family that supported me every step of the way," Rabourn posted on her campaign's Facebook page following the results.

"I am overwhelmed by the support that I received. I promise to fight for conservative values in Frankfort. I will defend the lives of the unborn, demand accountability, and advocate for our constitutional rights. I am proud to be your next State Representative."

In the local race for Soil and Water Conservational District supervisor, three candidates filled open seats while another vacancy exists on the board. Greg Heveline was elected with 2,027 votes while Zachary Ellis got 1,611 and write-in Tommy Web got 17.

Suzy Sachleben-Turner won her first full term on the Trimble County Board of Education for the 1st District after running unopposed and receiving 731 votes. Jennifer Aponte also won reelection for the 5th District, receiving 563 votes. McKenzie Harper won an unopposed reelection for the 4th District after getting 23 votes as a write-in.

Four seats were open in city commissioners elections in both Milton and Bedford this year.

In Bedford, Mike Wright got most of the votes (118), while William "Big Will" McCoy had 99, Gary "Newt" Johnson got 94 and Angie Robinson was fourth with 61. Thomas Edwards just missed the cut with 54 votes, as did Travis Price with 49.

In Milton, Troy Alexander was the top vote-getter with 151 votes, Jerry Harmon had 129, Lynn Jones Comeaux got 119 and Tyler "T-Dog" Reed got 99 votes. Joshua Myers, a write-in, received six votes.

Kentucky Republican leaders, McConnell praise statewide wins

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT — Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell joined Republican leaders of the Kentucky legislature Friday to herald what he said was the final step in a transformation of the state's political landscape in Tuesday's election.

"It is a dramatically different state than what it was," said McConnell, who was himself a big winner in his bid for a 7th term.

McConnell, still waiting to learn if he will retain his status as majority leader in Washington, deflected questions about the fairness of the election, with both the presidency and control of the Senate hanging in the balance. Republicans are clinging to a narrow majority with several races still too early to call and at least one Georgia Senate race headed to a runoff.

But McConnell celebrated the successes of his fellow Kentucky Republicans, who expanded overwhelming majorities in Kentucky's General Assembly in Tuesday's election, likely increasing their ability to push back against Democratic Gov. Andy Beshear.

Republicans made gains throughout the state, notably knocking off Democratic incumbents who had defeated Republicans in 2018 in suburban areas. As of Tuesday's election, Republicans have picked up 73 house seats, though two state house races have yet to be called. They also won 14 state senate races, while Democrats won five.

McConnell commended his fellow Republicans, calling the election results a final step in Republican's decades-long mission to reshape what once was a Democratic stronghold into reliably GOP territory.

Let Us Pause to Honor the Memory of

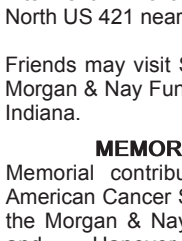
Mr. Eric Norman Hatton



Mr. Eric Norman Hatton, age 66, of Deputy, Indiana, entered this life on November 8, 1953 in Scottsburg, Indiana. He was the loving son of the late John and Velsie Krieger Hatton. He resided all of his life in the Deputy community, was raised in the Baptist faith and was a 1972 graduate of Madison Consolidated High School. Eric was united in marriage on July 13, 1974 in Shelbyville, Indiana to Faith A. Wilgus. This happy union of 46 years was blessed with sons, Eric Christopher and Timothy Ryan and a daughter, Jennifer Marie. He had worked as a union pipe fitter with Local 136 out of Evansville and Local 502 out of Louisville for over 25 years. He also worked as a press assistant at Multi Color in Scottsburg for seven years. Eric loved caring for his grandchildren, hunting, feeding the birds, gardening, camping and had enjoyed farming earlier in life. He had fought a battle with lung cancer since March. Eric died on Tuesday, November 3, 2020, at 7:52 p.m. in the Emergency Room at King's Daughters' Hospital in Madison, Indiana.

A LOVING FAMILY

Eric will be missed by his loving wife of 46 years, Faith A. Wilgus Hatton of Deputy, Indiana; his son, Eric Christopher "Chris" Hatton and his wife, Candice of Deputy, Indiana; his daughter, Jennifer Marie Hatton Lee of Deputy, Indiana; his grandchildren, Amelia (Eddie), Bradley, Shelby, Michelle, and Jackson; his brothers, John Samuel Hatton and his wife, Cindy of Owensboro, Kentucky, Howard William Hatton and his wife, Sharree of Deputy, Indiana, Adrian James Hatton and his wife, Linda of Lexington, Indiana; several nieces, nephews and other relatives. He was preceded in death by his father, John Hatton, his mother, Velsie Krieger Hatton, his son, Timothy Ryan Hatton, died July 15, 1980, his sister, Zandra Jean Hatton Cox, died July 8, 2005, his mother in law, Darleith Kay Bledsoe Wilgus, died November 14, 2017.

FUNERAL CEREMONY

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday, November 7, 2020, at 1:00 p.m., by Bro. Billy Hatton at the Morgan & Nay Funeral Centre, 325 Demaree Drive in Madison, Indiana. Interment will follow in the Grandview Memorial Gardens,9306 North US 421 near Madison, Indiana.

MADISON COURIER BOYS CROSS COUNTRY RUNNER OF THE YEAR

Nina Campbell

Trimble County sophomore Jessup Smith is the Madison Courier Boys Cross Country Runner of the Year.

Smith sets the pace for Trimble

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Jessup Smith isn't one to pace himself. Rather than hang back, save his energy and close strong, the Trimble County sophomore prefers to jump out to a quick lead and coast to the win.

That strategy may have been at odds with what his coach wanted, but it served Smith well as he ran to a runner-up finish at regional, a 10th-place finish in the KHSAA Class A State Championships and this year's Madison Courier Boys Cross Country Runner of the Year award.

Trimble coach Jared Sanford would have liked to have seen his star runner save some energy early in races and close strong, but it didn't take long before the Raider mentor began to see things Smith's way.

"He likes going out fast, getting to an early lead and then hanging on," Sanford said. "Starting out, I wasn't too sure about that, but he showed he could do it."

Smith's strategy was all the more impressive considering how he spent his weekends. On Friday nights, Smith suited up for the Trimble football team, playing a large role on both sides of the ball. Less than 12 hours after finishing a game, he would be back on the cross country course, running 5K races.

It's the type of schedule that can wear on an athlete physically, but it didn't seem to bother Smith much.

"It was difficult at some points but not difficult all of the time," Smith said. "On away games it was difficult but home games it wasn't too bad."

"I wasn't the biggest fan of it but I let him make those calls," Sanford said. "He still had a good season."

The results speak for themself. Smith was Trimble's top runner all season and despite playing football, his speeds got better throughout the season. His time of 17:27 while placing second in the Region 5 meet was the fastest by any runner in the area and only teammate Matthew Craig and Switzerland County's Nathan Furnish broke 18 minutes this season among all local runners.

"He (Jessup Smith) likes going out fast, getting to an early lead and then hanging on. Starting out, I wasn't too sure about that, but he showed he could do it."

— Jared Sanford
Trimble coach

He finished 10th at the biggest meet of the year, but he wasn't happy with his time of 17:32.74. While he was pleased to crack the top 10, the sophomore has far bigger goals than simply placing.

"It was hard to get around some of them. A lot of them are pretty tall and fast," Smith said with a smile. "I just need to put in the work and hopefully God pulls you through and follows your plans. My goal is to win state."

It's a heady goal for a kid who started running competitively just three years ago. He ran track & field as a sixth grader and was talked into running distance races by his coach. Three years later, he's making plans to win a state title.

But if there is any athlete who may pull it off, it's Smith. Sanford took over the Trimble cross country program in late August and it took less than two months to make him a believer.

"The future is bright for him. Tenth as a sophomore is great," Sanford said. "If we can get top five next year, that's a great step and then as a senior, he wants to win it. I think he can do it."

How should you tackle the debt that threatens your best-laid retirement plans?

By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/
Wealth Management

"In a perfect world, people entering retirement would have a house they own free and clear, several streams of reliable, predictable income, and no debt. But a perfect world does not always exist in real life." Steve Dybwad

Unfortunately, the reality is a lot different for those retiring now and who will retire soon. A recent survey conducted by Pew Research indicates that over 40% of Baby Boomers have credit card debt as they near retirement. The median balance of that debt is around $4,000.

35% of those surveyed also had car loans with balances in the thousands, while another 13% had student loans and other education debt.

Consumer debt in retirement means a reduction in monthly cash flow. Reducing cash flow makes it harder to deal with healthcare issues, pay for leisure activities and vacations, or deal with emergencies.

Carrying debt into retirement can also force retirees to draw down their accounts and pensions much faster than they planned. Debts are stressful enough when a person is still employed. That anxiety multiplies once someone retires.

Interest rates on debt tend to exceed earnings on retirement investments. By some estimates, over 70% of Americans have not saved enough for retirement in the first place, so layering debt on top of this shortfall seems a sure recipe for disaster.

What can people within five years of retiring do to eliminate all or most of their debt? What can you do right now to increase your chances of a successful life after work by eliminating debt?

Train yourself now to live on less later. If you are still working but are looking forward to retiring in five to seven years, it's a great time to train yourself to live on a fixed income.

Pay off debt strategically. A popular method advocated by many financial educators is to pay down high-interest-rate debt as fast as possible. Working on the high-interest debt first makes sense from a purely mathematical point of view. However, you should not overlook the psychological components of debt reduction.

If you need to be encouraged and motivated, you might want to consider paying off small balances first. These little "victories" can give you a feeling of accomplishment.

Delay your retirement if you can. Putting off retirement is probably not an appealing solution to many people. I mean, who wants to work longer than necessary, especially if you aren't that happy in your career? But, if you are carrying a load of debt, do you want to drag that with you? Working even two years past your original target date can do wonders to help you pay off your bills.

Retirement plan distributions. If you are already retired but feeling the weight of debt payments pressing down on you, you could use proceeds from qualified plan distributions or pensions to pay down your bills. If you have money in certain kinds of annuities or life insurance policies, you might be able to access part of this money to reduce account balances. Consult your tax planner or advisor to understand potential tax issues from taking higher distributions.

Debt in your later years. Some people may wonder if it is even worth trying to get out of debt when you are in your late 60s, 70s, or 80s. Is it better to simply make the minimum payments and let those debts die when you die?

Each state has laws regarding how long creditors have to make claims against a deceased's estates. Typically, an estate is required to repay debts, including medical bills, before heirs can receive their inheritance. If you have loans with a co-signer or joint account holder, that person will still be responsible for that debt. If your family is concerned that your family will be left with nothing when your creditors are all paid off, you might consider purchasing a life insurance policy.

Whatever way you choose to approach debt as you enter your later years, you will want to seek the wise counsel of your estate planner, retirement and income specialist, insurance professional, and financial planner.

Southwestern girls open season with dominating win over Henryville

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

A dominate defensive effort helped overcome a less than spectacular offensive night and lead Southwestern to a 50-25 girls basketball win at home over Henryville in the Rebels' season opener on Thursday.

Southwestern's suffocating defense never relented, harassing the Hornets into a 6-for-44 shooting (13.6%) while forcing 23 turnovers on 18 steals.

The Rebels weren't nearly as sharp offensively, shooting only 28.6% (16-for-56) themselves, but coach Devin Brierly was more than happy to walk away with the win.

"We really feed off our defense and we want to score in transition and our defense is where it starts and that's how we plan to play all year," Brierly said. "Hopefully, the next outing we'll come out and shoot a little better. But a win's a win. I thought the kids played with a lot of enthusiasm and energy and we're really pleased with a 1-0 start."

Henryville (0-1) was held scoreless the entire first quarter and didn't hit its first shot from the floor until nine minutes had elapsed in the game. The Hornets had trouble even getting off shots much less make them as the Southwestern's half-court press took them out of the game.

Despite the impressive defense, it took some time for the Rebels to score enough points to pull away. Foul trouble took Ashton Goode off the floor for most of the first half and the Rebels hit only seven field goals in the first half, leading 11-0 after the first quarter and 22-8 at halftime.

But Southwestern (1-0) took care of that problem in the third quarter to blow open the game. With Goode back on the floor, the Rebels scored transition points — off steals and rebounds — on five-straight possessions at one point to open a 20-point lead and never look back.

David Campbell

Southwestern's Trinity McLain (middle) chases after a loose ball with teammate Ellie Foley (right) and Henryville's Avery King (3) in pursuit during the Rebels' season opening win at home on Thursday.

"We really feed off our defense and we want to score in transition and our defense is where it starts and that's how we plan to play all year."

— Devin Brierly
Southwestern coach

"Defense is really our strong point and they don't really have a choice because I'm a defensive-minded coach," Brierly said with a laugh. "They're really starting to understand the concepts and they've really bought in to what we want to try to do and I really think they did that tonight."

Goode finished with 14 points — all in the second half — to lead Southwestern and added seven rebounds while Trinity McLain scored 10. Ellie Foley did not reach double figures in any statistical category but finished with an impressive overall line of eight points, six rebounds, five assists and six steals.

Southwestern coach Devin Brierly address her team during a timeout in the Rebels' season-opening win over Henryville on Thursday at home.

Riley Nunn had seven points and seven rebounds to lead Henryville while Esmeralda Ruiz and Alli Thompson scored four points each.

Southwestern will have more than a week off before playing its next game when the Rebels travel to Oldenburg Academy on Friday, Nov. 13.

Johnson Lake among those restocked with rainbow trout

Deer gun season to begin Nov. 14

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

The Indiana Department of Natural Resources announced that it has recently stocked several lakes across the state with surplus rainbow trout, including Johnson Lake in Madison.

The surplus trout range in size from six to eight inches and come from the Curtis Creek Trout Rearing Station. Johnson Lake received 300 trout recently.

Other lakes around the state that received the fish include: Pinhook Lagoon, St. Joseph County, 1,600 fish; Martin Lake, Lagrange County, 435 fish; Oliver Lake, Lagrange County, 1,484 fish; Brookville Tailwater, Franklin County, 1,500 fish; Delaware Lake, Marion County, 700 fish; Big Blue River, Henry County, 1,125 fish; Spring Mill Lake, Lawrence County, 750 fish; Garvin Park Lake, Vanderburgh County, 500 fish; Oak Lake, Clark State Forest, 405 fish; and Garvin Park Lake, Evansville, 550 fish.

Anglers 18 and older must have a valid Indiana fishing license and trout stamp. Both can be purchased at on.IN.gov/INhuntfish. The catch limit per angler is five trout.

DNR RESEARCHING BASS AT PATOKA

DNR fisheries biologists, through a partnership with Indiana Bass Federation (IBF), have started a research project to evaluate survival rates of stocked largemouth bass in Patoka Lake.

The IBF solicited donations to purchase 3,200 advanced fingerling largemouth bass. More than 900 were stocked in May, and 2,300 are being stocked early this month. All of the stocked bass are tagged with an internal passive integrated transponder (PIT) tag, allowing each fish to be uniquely identifiable by using a scanner.

Research across the central United States has shown stocking fingerling size (2-4 inch) largemouth bass into lakes with self-sustaining bass populations has had limited to no success at improving bass populations. This project is using advanced fingerlings (6-9 inches) to test if these larger fish will survive and grow to the legal minimum length of 15 inches at Patoka Lake.

"Thanks goes out to the Indiana Bass Federation for their fundraising efforts and making this research project possible," said Dan Carnahan, south region fisheries supervisor. "We look forward to evaluating the results of this survival study."

DNR will conduct spring and fall electrofishing surveys over the next three years to monitor the stocked and naturally reproduced bass populations to determine if they differ in growth, catch rates, and condition factor. Starting in 2023, DNR will search for PIT tagged bass while monitoring bass tournaments to help determine if the stocking was successful.

DEER GUN SEASON STARTS NOV. 14

Indiana's gun season for deer will begin Saturday, Nov. 14 and run through Sunday, Nov. 29.

According to the Indiana Department of Natural Resources, licensed hunters are only allowed to take one buck with a firearms license. However, hunters can harvest an antlerless deer during the firearms season with a firearm if they purchase a deer bundle license or comprehensive lifetime hunting license.

All antlerless deer taken with a firearm during the firearms season will count toward the bonus antlerless quota unless the animal was harvested in a deer reduction zone with the appropriate license and the deer is counted toward the deer reduction zone bad limit.

Also, there will be two days — Nov. 28 and 29 — when youth hunters are allowed to hunt for free when accompanied by an adult at least 18 years of age with a valid hunting license. Youth may harvest a deer, hunt for waterfowl hunting or field game on this days. During free youth hunting days, resident youth and nonresident youth do not need a State migratory waterfowl stamp, or a Harvest Information Program number to hunt waterfowl or other migratory birds. However, all persons 16 years old or older must possess a federal duck stamp.

the safety and prosperity of Jefferson County. If positive cases and hospitalizations continue to increase we may be pushed back to Stage 4 or 4.5," JCHD said in a news release. "We are working hard with our schools to keep them open. We have had two schools make the decision to switch to virtual learning for a short period of time, we fully support this decision. Other schools have been able to weather storm, for now. We can get these students back into the classrooms if we all do our part."

Citing the rise in COVID cases, Prince of Peace Catholic Schools and Hanover College both made the decision to switch to virtual.

Shawe Memorial High School and Pope John Elementary students will do live virtual learning until at least Nov. 17 and cancel all sporting events and practices. Other schools in neighboring counties are also being impacted while others are trying to weather the storm.

Hanover College, which reportedly has more than four dozen posirtive cases of COVID, actually made the decision late last month.

"To continue ensuring the safety and wellbeing of our students, faculty and staff, we are implementing the next steps in our COVID-19 response strategy," the college posted on its website. "We know many students would like to finish the term on campus or need to for various reasons, and the College wants to make this possible. We are also aware that many students would prefer to finish the term from home."

"All courses will move to remote instruction no later than Monday, Nov. 9 ... Your faculty members will be in touch about specific plans for their courses ... residential halls and Greek houses will remain open to students until 6 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 20."

Earlier this week, Trimble County Schools in Kentucky were closely watching infection rates there while pondering wether to switch back to virtual learning as the school had finished last school year and started this school year. The district issued a statement Friday morning, noting that while Trimble County remains in the "red" category in terms of infections, the number of cases involving students — three cases this past week, all now in quarantine — is much lower than the community.

"Since our case and quarantine rate is still relatively low in the school district, TCPS will continue with in-person classes next week, November 9-13. In addition, we will continue to monitor the status of our district and county incidence rates in order to make informed decisions as to whether we will continue with in-person instruction, implement a hybrid schedule to reduce the number of students in the building or explore the possibility of transitioning to virtual learning for a period of time," the district said in a release. "In the meantime, we have enacted stricter guidelines for tonight's football game and will most likely cancel middle school basketball games scheduled for next week to help protect the ability to continue 'in-person' classes."

Meanwhile, Jefferson Circuit Judge D.J. Mote this week canceled a jury trial scheduled for Monday and told those summoned for jury duty to stay home.

"Due to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic and the current deterioration in local health conditions, the Jefferson Circuit Court is canceling the jury trial scheduled for Monday, Nov. 9, 2020 at the Venture Out Business Center," Mote wrote. " Any member of our community who has received a summons to appear for jury duty may disregard their summons."

According to JCHD, local residents "have the tools right at our fingertips to slow this spread down."

The health department urged residents to social distance from those outside their household, mask up at indoor public spaces

Managing Editor

The Managing Editor is a full-time position with responsibility for the daily operation of The Paducah Sun and its weekly newspapers within the Western Kentucky media group of Paxton Media. The job includes understanding what matters to people; planning daily news coverage; planning special section coverage; supervising reporters, sportswriters, and freelancer contributors; helping to build an engaged digital audience and presenting news and information through different platforms of media.

Duties & Responsibilities

Oversees planning of day-to-day news and editorial staff; proofreads, edits, and rewrites daily, investigative, and enterprise stories; ensures news staff post to website and social media, and distributes content to our media partners. This position has direct responsibility for and oversight of news and sports departments, including hiring along with enforcement of newsroom and company policy. Position is responsible for assuring ethical conduct of news operation and staff.

Also, responsible for understanding the wants and needs of readers and the public while applying staff and resources in a way that best meets those needs. Developing a news staff that is constantly developing story ideas and story pitches. Assures competent, professional and fair editing of staff reporters and protects accuracy and integrity of items ultimately published in the newspaper. This position will also plan and execute an annual budget for all news departments and be responsible for all payroll duties within these departments.

Qualifications

College degree required. At least 8 years of editing and reporting at a daily newspaper. Proven track record of team leadership, management and strong knowledge of AP Style writing. Excellent writing and coaching skills; superior command of language and grammar are required. Must have prior experience in a newsroom leadership role.

Send cover letter, resume and salary requirements to mjones@paducahsun.com or by mailing the information to:

Time for love, not excuses

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I am 24 years old, and my boyfriend is 64. We have been in a relationship for five years. He's everything I've ever wanted in a person: He's smart, funny, intelligent, caring and handsome. When we first started dating, I assumed that he was divorced, and I never bothered to ask otherwise. But after we'd been dating for some time, he took me to a lake house one weekend and said that we were there so that he could finalize his divorce. Well, for one reason or another the divorce never actually happened.

He and his wife have two grown children. I'm really not sure how to go forward with our relationship. I confronted him about not being divorced, and his excuse was he didn't have enough time to go through all the steps of the divorce proceedings.

I feel so hurt. It's so painful to be in love with someone whom I may or may not have to myself. When we first started dating, he would talk about how he wanted to marry me. But now things have changed. It's been a shock to me. I didn't even want marriage at first, because I was unsure if that's what I wanted with him. But now to know that it's probably never going to happen for us — I just can't shake my feelings at all for him. We live together but sleep in separate rooms to avoid engaging in physical intimacy before marriage, yet I'm starting to think that day might never come. It breaks my heart deeply. I'm still happy with him at times, but there are other times where I'm just heartbroken. — Desperate for Advice

Dear Desperate: If he hasn't left her after five years, he's probably never going to leave her — and that's just as well, for your sake. Why would you want to marry a man who clearly has such little respect for marriage?

I know that he must seem like the whole world to you right now, because you started dating him when you were just 19. But I promise you he's not. Break it off and find someone who gives you love, not excuses.

Dear Annie: I hate all the holidays. Am I weird? I don't want to decorate or buy special things or exchange gifts or make cookies. — Holiday Anxiety

Dear Holiday Anxiety: You're far from weird. In fact, a 2018 survey found that the holiday season stresses out 88% of Americans. Many dread the financial strain and family drama. Perhaps you'll find the holidays less stressful once you let go of all expectations — of you and of others. This year, with the holidays muted out of necessity, I hope that we see how unnecessary all of the spending and stressing is. The season can and should be a time for family, grateful reflection, service and rest. I hope that by this time next year, we'll all be seeing our loved ones in person again and realize what a gift it is just to have one another.
